

Final Customer check-in notes

According to the customer, the website looked polished, professional and had a flow to it that is essential to a resource hub. It followed a clear path for navigation and had information set up in a good manner. Efforts to study accessibility and make the site more visually appealing were appreciated by the customer as well. Victor Roman Morrow, the additional supervising customer and Director of Impact at SSCF also agreed with Brooklyn and added that the website was cohesive.